A whistle breaks the silence of the dark mountain air distant rumbling draws steadily closer and closer the magnificent metal monster meanders up the mountainside hissing steam billowing smoke and grinding wheels
a grease stained engineer is the only sign of human activity

GALLERIA Artist's Choice Group Show
STUDIO E Roni Jones
SPOTLIGHT Rafael Reyes
ARTISAN Susan Obaza

Every so often, something happens that makes me realize just how impactful our work here is. Last weekend, I dropped into the Ocean City Center for the Arts on Sunday, and a gentleman at the front desk was talking with our staff members. They stopped me and said he would like to meet me. His name was Bill York, and he had come in to thank us for the inspiration he received while attending Free Family Art Day with his wife and daughter in 2016.

Their family had painted kindness rocks that day with our outreach coordinator, Debbi Dean-Colley. Tragically, several months later their 19-year-old son committed suicide. They found themselves painting rocks with positive messages for suicide awareness and prevention as a way of dealing with their grief. When people began finding the rocks and posting them on Facebook, it led the Yorks to create a suicide awareness nonprofit in their son's memory: The Joshua York Legacy Foundation. Their Facebook page, Suicide Prevention Rocks, has 2,300 followers in 25 countries! Not only did this family use art as a means of dealing with grief, the inspiration they received at the Arts Center influenced them to help others prevent suicide. It is so validating to see the work we do here inspire others far beyond our doors.

I invite you to join us this winter at the Arts Center, take a class, see the exhibits, or participate in one of our upcoming events. And be inspired by the arts!

After six years of service, Marian Bickerstaff has completed her term as Board President. The progress the Art League has made in the space of her leadership is phenomenal. I am honored and humbled to succeed her. Notwithstanding my experience with nonprofits, it is a daunting task. Fortunately, we have a dedicated staff, an experienced Board of Directors, and a committed cadre of volunteers who make the sun shine!

I have been in love with Ocean City since first I stuck my five-year-old toes into the surf. There was no question that when I retired after 36 years of teaching, I would make it my permanent home. I stumbled across the Ocean City Center for the Arts one day while riding my bicycle. One step inside, and I was hooked.

I soon realized that the Art League provided the perfect opportunity to give back to the community, to fulfill the need to be creative, to make meaningful friendships, and to help make Ocean City a better place to live, work, and play.

There is no off-season at the Ocean City Center for the Arts. Take a look at the breadth of classes and activities outlined in this calendar. There is something for everyone. Come to the Empty Bowl dinner. Check out the 3rd Annual Film Festival, and the live performances of Brown Box Theater. There is so much going on.

And consider getting involved. If you can share some of your time or treasure, or a little bit of both, to help things along, I guarantee you will find it a satisfying experience.
